Containing health care costs without sacrificing access or quality: What are the most promising policies to date in the US?

- Historic trends in per capita health care costs
- Exploring the reasons for recent slowdown in per capita costs in the US
- Reviewing cost containment developments in Massachusetts, the first state to achieve near universal coverage, but also the highest cost state
- Comparison with the proposed evolution of the health care system in Quebec

Professor Nancy M. Kane
Professor of Management in the Department of Health Policy and Management
Associate Dean for Case-Based Teaching and Learning at the Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health

Joanne Castonguay
Research Director at the Institute for Research on Public Policies
Collaborator at CIRANO

October 6th, 2016
5 PM – 7 PM
CIRANO
1130 Sherbrooke street W, office 1400
Montreal, QC H3A 2M8
60 seats available. $25, cocktail included

Register Online Now!